

I am an engineer not an economist but I think Canada should study the model used by the U.K. on foreign talent and investment. I think it is a good example of success in a rapidly globalizing world. They have been able to attract foreign talent and investment in their numbers from all around the world without marginalizing the native englishman.

David Momoh