While I understand the desire to increase competition, I don't understand why the current government is so interested in selling everything to foreign interests. It seems that this particular government is almost certain that only foreign interests can operate our businesses successfully. They believe that they would be more productive and would make certain that only right wing conservative interests are served in the communications industry. An example might be the new plan of a right wing billionaire in Quebec to set up a neocon network similar to Fox to promote that view and use phony and misleading information and outright propaganda (see Fox Network Bio) to ensure they are successful in their endeavors.

I should add there is little room in a country of 30 million to increase the competition for cell phones and other communication devices and access without screwing up the entire industry.
