SALAME PIACENTINO

Indication type
Agricultural Product or Food

Category
Fresh, frozen and processed meats: products falling under Chapter 2 or heading 16.01 or 16.02

Goods
salame

Territory
The area of the Province of Piacenza, Italy, limited to those areas no higher than 900 meters elevation.

Qualification
Protected under EU Regulation No. 1151/2012. Salame Piacentino belongs to the group of salted and naturally cured products, bagged, coarse-grained, obtained from the lean and fat parts of pigs, to be consumed uncooked. To make Salame Piacentino, lean pork is used, with the addition of 15% to 20% pork fat. The finished product is cylinder-shaped, normally weighing between 0,25 % to 1 kg. When sliced, the color is bright red, interspersed with dots of fat. The aroma is distinctive, very intense, rather sweet, with the characteristic smell of sausage meat. Salame Piacentino is made using fresh pig thighs from animals born, raised and slaughtered in Emilia-Romagna and Lombardy and meeting production regulation requirements. Geographical area: The making of Salame Piacentino takes place in the area of the Province of Piacenza, limited to those areas no higher than 900 meters elevation. Evidence of Origin: The making of Piacenza processed pork products, especially of Salame Piacentino, has taken place since Roman times and has been handed down over time, becoming concentrated in the geographic area defined above. The history of the product goes back to the development of a typical rural culture common to the entire Po Valley, the area supplying the raw materials, which are then processed in an area which is smaller and which has well- established, particular traditions regarding this product. The product's origin is thus connected with spreading of pig-breeding in the area and with the particular climatic conditions. Historical references to Salame Piacentino are found in the gastronomic traditions of the Po Valey. At the present time, the production rules follow the lines of the already existing specific national regulation for the designation of origin prosciutti of Parma and San Daniele. Acquisition: Salame Piacentino productions includes the following stages: grinding of the meat; seasoning with a mixture of salt, spices and condiments; mixing; stuffing and tying; aging. Aging begins at the time of salting, and must take place for a period of no less than two months. Link: The requirements for Salame Piacentino depend on environmental conditions and on a natural human factor. In particular, the unique character of the raw material is strictly connected to the defined geographic macrozone. In the area which supplies the raw material, the development of livestock-breeding is linked to the extensive cultivation on grains and to the processing of dairy products, which is particularly specialized, making the area very suitable for pig-breeding. The justification of the localized production of Salame Piacentino lies in the particular conditions of the microzone defined above. The environmental factors are closely tied to the characteristics of the production area, where cool, wide valleys with abundant water and hilly wooded areas predominate, having a great influence on the climate which, in turn, has a great influence on the particular qualities of the finished product. The set of "raw material" - product - name " is linked to the specific socioeconomic development of this geographic area, with certain characteristics irreproducible elsewhere.

Territory
The area of the Province of Piacenza, Italy, limited to those areas no higher than 900 meters elevation.

Qualification
Protected under EU Regulation No. 1151/2012. Coppa Piacentina is a salted, naturally cured pork product, preserved uncooked, in a casing made from the parietal peritoneum of pigs or from the colon. The finished product has a cylindrical shaper that is slightly narrower at the ends. The texture is firm, inelastic, and when sliced, it is homogenous, of a red color interspersed with pinkish white in the marbled parts. Fresh pig thighs from animals born, raised and slaughtered in Emilia-Romagna and Lombardy and which meet production rule requirements are used for the raw material. Geographical area: The making of Coppa Piacentina takes place in the area of the Province of Piacenza, limited to those areas no higher than 900 meters elevation. Evidence of Origin: The making of Piacenza processed pork products, and especially of Coppa Piacentina, has taken place since Roman times and has been handed down over time, becoming concentrated in the geographic area defined in point c). The history of the product goes back to the development of a typical rural culture common to the entire Po Valley, the area supplying the raw materials, which are then processed in an area which is much smaller and which has well-established, particular traditions regarding this product. The product's origin is thus connected with the spreading of pig breeding in the area and with the particular climatic conditions. Historical references to Coppa Piacentina are found in the gastronomic traditions of the Po Valley. At the present time, the production rules follow the lines of the already existing specific national regulations for the designation of origin prosciutti of Parma and San Daniele. Acquisition: Coppa Piacentina production includes the following stages: dry-salting; rubbing; covering with animal casings; tying; drying and aging. Link: The requirements for Coppa Piacentina depend on the environmental conditions and on natural and human factors. In particular, the unique character of the raw material is strictly tied to the defined supply geographic macrozone, while the justification for the production of Coppa Piacentina lies in the micro-zone defined in point c). In the area which supplies the raw material, the development of livestock-breeding is linked to the extensive cultivation of grains and to the processing of dairy products, which is particularly specialized, making the area very suitable for pig breeding. The justification for the localized production of Coppa Piacentina lies in the particular conditions of the micro-zone defined in point c). The environmental factors are closely tied to the characteristics of the production area, where cool, wide valleys with abundant water and hilly wooded areas predominate, having a great influence on the climate which, in turn, has a great influence on the particular qualities of the finished product. The set of "raw material - product - name" is linked to the specific socioeconomic development of this geographic area, with certain characteristics irreproducible elsewhere.
